is now in progress in Washington: "Is not this the most prosperous country on the face of the earth?" asked

Congressman Gear of Iowa. "It is often said to be," replied Mr. Harter of Ohio, "but I want to ask you all a question. Is there a man in this House who can to-day take his note for $1,000 to his bank and, with Government bonds for security, get it discounted for three months? If such a man is here let him stand up. I want to see him."

There was an impressive silence. Members on both sides looked at each other inquiringly, but nobody stood up. There was no applause and no laughter. but Mr. Harter had referred to a cold fact that struck home to every man in the

The span of wider sky,
The fanning of a cleaner breeze,
The ocean's endless cry,
I chafe amid the miles of walls
Of stones and red baked clay,
The far-off voice of Nature calls—
I fain would hie away.

I want the odor of the trees,

The sight of rolling grain,
I wish to loll and take my ease
Upon the smiling plain.
I pine where traffic roars along
In bot and bumid streets;
I'd gladly hear the brooklet's song
And taste of rural sweets.

I'd seek a place beneath whose skies
No multitudes have been,
Some earth-spot having still the guise
That God hath left it in.
I choke and faint in city heat,
What hapless fools are we
To tarry in the stenchful street

When earth has woods and sea!
